PREFACE

An attempt has been made in this book to give a complete list of Lowell's writings, and a selected list of what is most important that has been said about him, for the use of students, librarians, collectors, and others. No one who has any idea of what such a work implies in its preparation can anticipate that it will be complete in every particular or free from errors. The compiler has tried to avoid unnecessary blunders, and to make his work a helpful guide to those who may need it. As a literary worker he has had in mind the requirements of students rather than collectors in the arrangement of his materials. At the same time, he has anticipated the demand of the bibliographer for details and accuracy.

After a chronological list of Lowell's books, and another of Lowell bibliographies, there is given an alphabetical arrangement of his single titles, including poems, essays, criticisms, speeches, etc. In this list of single titles the place and date of the first appearance of each piece is briefly noted, also the place and date of its book publication. Important changes are noted, but no attempt has been made to give every form in which any poem or essay has appeared. In this list the prose titles have been printed in roman, the poems in italic, and the book titles in small capitals.

The early poems were in 1877 separated into "Earlier" and "Miscellaneous," and these permanent divisions have been indicated by brackets. The same has been done for "Memorial Verses" and "Poems of the War," to signify their separation from previous collections or groups.

The single works have been grouped together, in order that the various editions and other bibliographical details may be fully noted. There has been added a list of the most important criticisms, guides to study, and book-sale prices. It is hoped this arrangement will prove helpful, not only to students, but also to librarians and bibliographers. To bring everything relating to each of the books together it has been thought will prove a useful arrangement.

Under the head of complete editions will be found noted the successive additions which have been made to them, and the changes which have been made in the arrangement of titles and books. The contents of the several editions are given whenever there have been additions or rearrangements.

Since many of the notices and criticisms do not relate to particular books, an alphabetical list has been given of those most worthy of attention, which repeats those presented under the individual titles. Lowell made a large number of speeches and addresses, the titles of which it has been thought best to place together, in order that their various repetitions and publications may be noted.

Lowell frequently changed the titles of his poems. Wherever this was done they have been listed under both titles. Under each the title is given in brackets as it appeared in the periodical or book mentioned, having its place on the same line.

The exact title-page of each of Lowell's books is given as it was worded in the first edition. Following the title-page date is given that of copyright and of actual publication in brackets, in those instances where the two do not agree.

In order to make this work more nearly complete, it has been thought best to include the prices at which first editions have been sold in recent years. These vary greatly, the price depending on the condition of the book, the competing demand for it, and whether it has special features which commend it to collectors. It is impossible in many instances to recover these details, therefore the prices given are suggestive only of what the first editions are likely to bring when in good condition.

ALPHABETICAL LIST OF SINGLE TITLES

The titles of poems are given in italic, prose articles in roman, and book-titles in small capitals. If the last entry under a title is not that of one of Lowell's books now published, or a division in his Complete Poems, it indicates that that title has not been retained by the author in his authorized works. When the titles of poems or essays have been changed, both are listed, that belonging to the volume indicated being enclosed in brackets.

[v] Preface.

Many of my readers, and all my friends, know that it was not by any desire of mine that this rather slim production is printed. Circumstances known to all my readers, and which I need not dilate on here, considerably cooled my interest in the performance. Many of the lines, though in fact they would even then be indifferent good, I should prefer if possible to see in prose. Sed Dis aliter. Many were written merely as rough draughts, which I intended to have altered and revised, but the change of feeling, mentioned above, has prevented, and rough draughts they are still. There are a few grains of gold, at least tinsel, in the composition, but the lead — oh word infaust to poets! — will, I fear, far outweigh them. A few passages I have omitted, whose place is sufficiently well supplied by asterisks.

Paltry, however, as it is, I submit it (at their desire) to my readers, confident

A YEAR'S LIFE

A YEAR'S LIFE. By James Russell Lowell. Ich habe gelebt und geliebet. Boston: C. C. Little and J. Brown. MDCCCXLI.

16mo, pp. viii, 182. Light brown boards, paper label. Slip of errata inserted opposite p. 182. Published January, 1841.

[v] [Dedication.]

The gentle Una I have loved,
The snowy maiden, pure and mild,
Since ever by her side I roved,
Through ventures strange, a wandering child,
In fantasy a Red Cross Knight,
Burning for her dear sake to fight.

If there be one who can, like her,
Make sunshine in life's shady places,
One in whose holy bosom stir
As many gentle household graces, —
And such I think there needs must be, —
Will she accept this book from me?

[vii] Contents.
[1] Half-title.
[2] [Poetical Preface.]

Hope first the gentle Poet leads,
And he is glad to follow her;
Kind is she, and to all his needs
With a free hand doth minister.

But, when Hope at last hath fled,
Cometh her sister Memory;
She wreathes Hope's garlands round her head,
And strives to seem as fair as she.

Then Hope comes back, and by the hand
She leads a child most fair to see,
Who with a joyous face doth stand
Uniting Hope and Memory.

So brighter grew the Earth around,
And bluer grew the sky above;
The Poet now his guide hath found,
And follows in the steps of Love.

[v–vii] TO WILLIAM PAGE

MY DEAR FRIEND, —

The love between us, which can now look back upon happy years of still enduring confidence, and forward, with a sure trust in its own prophecy of yet deeper and tenderer sympathies, as long as life shall remain to us, stands in no need, I am well aware, of so poor a voucher as an Epistle Dedicatory. True, it is one of Love's chiefest charms, that it must still take special pains to be superfluous in seeking out ways to declare itself, — but for these it demands no publicity, and wishes no acknowledgement. But the admiration which one soul feels for another loses half its warmth, if it let slip any opportunity of making itself heard and felt by that strange Abbot of Unreason which we call the World. For the humblest man's true admiration is no uncertain oracle of the verdict of Posterity, — the unerring tribunal where Genius is at last allowed the right of trial by its peers, and to which none but sincere and real Greatness can appeal with an unwavering heart. There the false witnesses of to-day will be unable to appear, being fled to some hospitable Texas in the realms of Limbo, beyond the reach of its jurisdiction and the summons of its apparitors.

I have never seen the works of the Great Masters of your Art, but I have studied their lives, and I am sure that no nobler, gentler, or purer spirit than yours was ever anointed by the Eternal Beauty to bear that part of her divine message which it belongs to the Great Painter to reveal. The sympathy of sister pursuits, of an agreeing artistic faith, and, yet more, of a common hope for the final destiny of man, has not been wanting to us, and now you will forgive the pride in having this advantage over you, namely, of telling that admiration in public which I have never stinted to utter in private. You will believe, that, as your winning that fadeless laurel, which you deserve, and which will one day surely be yours, can never heighten my judgement of you, so nothing that is not in your own control will ever lower it, and that I shall think as simply of you when the World's opinion has overtaken my own, as now.

As the swiftly diverging channels of Life bear wider and wider apart from us the friends who hoisted sail with us as fellow-mariners, when we cast off for the voyage, and as some, even, who are yet side by side with us, no longer send back to us an answering cheer, we are drawn the more closely to those that remain, and I would fain hope that this joining of our names will always be one of our not least happy memories.

And so, with all best wishes,

I remain always your friend,

J. R. Lowell.

[iv] ADVERTISEMENT TO THE ENGLISH EDITION

James Russell Lowell is a Young American Poet of great promise, whose writings have already obtained considerable reputation in his own country. The present Volume, recently published in New York, is now reprinted in London, in the belief that its thoughtfulness and beauty will commend it to the attention of the English Public; more especially as it appears to furnish a fair specimen of that new development of intellect and feeling, which renders much of the recent literature of America attractive to the minds of many Europeans.

CONVERSATIONS ON SOME OF THE OLD POETS

[iii] To my Father, Charles Lowell, D. D., whom, if I had not the higher privilege of revering as a parent, I should still have honored as a man and loved as a friend, this volume, containing many opinions from which he will wholly, yet with the large charity of a Christian heart, dissent, is inscribed, by his youngest child.

[iv] "Hail, bards of mighty grasp! on you
I chiefly call, the chosen few,
Who cast not off the acknowledged guide,
Who faltered not, nor turned aside,
Whose lofty genius could survive
Privation, under sorrow thrive."

WORDSWORTH.

[v–viii] TO THE READER

A preface is always either an apology or an explanation; and a good book needs neither. That I write one, then, proves that I am diffident of the merit of this volume, to a greater degree, even, than an author must necessarily be.

For the minor faults of the book, the hurry with which it has been prepared must plead in extenuation, since it was in process of writing and printing at the same time, so that I could never estimate its proportions as a whole. This must excuse the too great length of the First Conversation, which I should have divided, had I known in time how it would have grown under my hands, which I trust the candid reader will refer to the same exculpatory cause.

The substance of two other Conversations appeared more than two years ago in the "Boston Miscellany," a magazine conducted by my friend, N. Hale, Jr., Esq. The articles, as then written, met with some approbation, and I had often been urged to reprint them by friends with whose wishes it was as well my duty as my delight to comply. Yet I felt strongly reluctant in this matter; and my reluctance increased after looking over the articles and seeing how imperfect they were.

It then occurred to me, that, by throwing them into the form of conversations, greater freedom would be given them, and that discursiveness, which was their chief fault, (among many others, of style,) would find readier pardon. Some of the deepest, as well as the most delightful books, have been written in this form in our own language, not to speak of its prevalent use among the Greeks and Latins. I need only mention the names of Isaak Walton, Walter Savage Landor, and Horne Tooke, to recall to mind three of the most prominent among many English examples.[1]

I had no intention of giving them anything like a dramatic turn, and I trust I shall not so be censured. They are merely essays, divided in this way to allow them greater ease and frankness, and the privilege of wandering at will. That this license has not been carried to a greater degree than is warranted by the usual suggestiveness of conversation will, I think, be conceded. If some of the topics introduced seem foreign to the subject, I can only say, that they are not so to my mind, and that an author's object in writing criticisms is not only to bring to light the beauties of the works he is considering, but also to express his own opinions upon those and other matters.

Wishing, as I did, to preserve, as far as possible, unaltered, whatever had given pleasure to others in the articles as already written, I experienced many difficulties. It is impossible to weld cast-iron, and I had not time to melt and recast it.

I am not bold enough to esteem these essays of any great price. Standing as yet only in the outer porch of life, I cannot be expected to report of those higher mysteries which lie unrevealed in the body of the temple. Yet, as a child, when he has found out a mean pebble, which differs from ordinary only so much as by a stripe of quartz or a stain of iron, calls his companions to behold his treasure, which to them also affords matter of delight and wonder; so I cannot but hope that my little findings may be pleasant and haply instructive to some few.

An author's opinions should be submitted to no arbitration but that of solitude and his own conscience; but many defects and blemishes in his mode of expressing them may doubtless be saved him by submitting his work, before publication, to the judgement of some loving friend — and if to the more refined eye of a woman, the better. But the haste with which these pages have been prepared and printed has precluded all but a very trifling portion of them from being judged by any eye save my own.

A FABLE FOR CRITICS

Reader! Walk up at once (it will soon be too late) and buy at a perfectly ruinous rate a FABLE FOR CRITICS; or Better — I like, as a thing that the reader's first fancy may strike, an old-fashioned title-page, such as presents a tabular view of the volume's contents — A GLANCE AT A FEW OF OUR LITERARY PROGENIES (Mrs. Malaprop's word) from the Tub of Diogenes. That is, a Series of Jokes. BY A WONDERFUL QUIZ, who accompanies himself with a rub-a-dub-dub, full of spirit and grace, on the top of the tub. SET FORTH IN October the 21st day, in the year '48. By G. P. PUTNAM, Broadway.

12mo, pp. [i]–iii, [5]–78, brown cloth. Half-title, with full-page advertisement of Putnam's books on reverse, opposite title-page. Rubricated title-page, in black and red, with "That is, a Series of Jokes," in red, while "set forth in" is in black. The line, "A vocal and musical medley," is wanting. "By," before G. P. Putnam, forms a single line. Rhymed preface, in prose form (contained in all subsequent editions), occupies pp. [i]–iii. Headlines over text, with a small vignette of harp on last page. Cloth of the binding is a dark-brown muslin, with simple brown stamp on sides, with publisher's monogram in a shield in the middle, and plain gold lettering on the back.

In this edition there are several misprints. Page 25, line 10, has "cotilion;" and page 40, line 21, "Goliah." In a letter to Sydney Howard Gay, December 20, 1848, Lowell writes, "Briggs must give you a copy of the second edition, in which the atrocious misprints of the other will be corrected."

The first edition was advertised for October 20, and was ready for the public on the 25th. The title-page stated the date of its publication as the 21st, which was in later editions changed to the 31st. The first edition was of 1000 copies, was printed from type, and the forms were distributed as soon as the printing was completed. This may in part account for the numerous misprints.

In Putnam's Book-list for 1848 appeared this announcement:

Fable for Critics: A New Satirical Poem; or, A Glance at a Few of Our Literary Progenies. By a Wonderful Quiz. 1 Vol., 12mo, boards, 50 cents; cloth, 63 cents.

The "Fable" is full of a genial humor, and abounds in most felicitous satire at our men and women of letters, some of whom are sketched with inimitable skill and truthfulness.

THE SAME. Second Edition.

Reader! Walk up at once (it will soon be too late) and buy at a perfectly ruinous rate a FABLE FOR CRITICS; or, Better (I like, as a thing that the reader's first fancy may strike, an old-fashioned title-page, such as presents a tabular view of the volume's contents) A GLANCE AT A FEW OF OUR LITERARY PROGENIES (Mrs. Malaprop's word) from the Tub of Diogenes; A Vocal and Musical Medley. That is, a Series of Jokes. BY A WONDERFUL QUIZ, who accompanies himself with a rub-a-dub-dub, full of spirit and grace, on the top of the tub. SET FORTH IN October, the 21st day, in the year '48. G. P. PUTNAM, Broadway.

The title-page of the second edition differs in several essential respects from the first. "A vocal and musical medley" has been added, and "by" before the publisher's name has been omitted. The parenthetical clause, "I like, . . . contents," has been enclosed in parentheses. In some copies of this edition the publisher's address is changed, as noted hereafter.

The second edition was stereotyped and appeared early in January, 1849. Some of the misprints were corrected; but a curious one remained on page 54, line 18, where "censor" appears in place of "censer," thus spoiling both the meaning and the pun. Three printings of this edition seem to have taken place in 1849 (though each has been called an edition); the first in January, the second in February, and the third in November. It is very difficult to distinguish the several printings of the second edition, five or six copies with distinctive features having been examined, two of which appear to have been printed or bound-up in November. In one of these the rhymed preface occupies pp. [iii]–v; text, pp. [7]–80. There are no headlines, and the vignette on last page is absent. The only signature is 2* on page 33. No advertisements. In another copy there is no half-title; and the names of the printers, Leavitt, Trow & Co., appear on reverse of title-page. "A Preliminary Note to the Second Edition" follows the title-leaf, unpaged, and is succeeded by the rhymed preface, paged [iii]–v. Putnam's advertisement at the end is dated November, 1848. The matter on each page is identical with the first edition, but the type is different, and the pagination is two pages ahead in all printings of the second; that is, page 7 of the second corresponds to page 5 of the first edition. There is no ruled headline. In another copy the rhymed preface is first and is followed by the preliminary note.

What appears to be a fourth printing gives the address of Putnam as 10 Park Place, date same as in first edition, with rhyme left imperfect. In 1890 Lowell wrote: "Mr. Putnam, I believe, never discovered that the title-page was in metre, nor that it was in rhyme either. Mr. Norton told me the other day that he had a copy of some later edition (after Putnam had changed his place of business), in which the imprint was 'G. P. Putnam, Astor (or something) Place.' I don't remember whether I knew of it at the time, but had I known, I should have let it pass as adding to the humor of the book." This edition has no advertising pages, and the "Preliminary Note" is after the rhymed preface. Muslin binding, blind stamp on sides, with oval in centre, and blind lines at the top and bottom of the back.

THE SAME. Fifth edition, Boston: Ticknor and Fields, 1856.

12mo. Bottom of title-page after "top of the tub" omitted. Matter on each page the same, but different type. "Candid remarks to the Reader," pp. [iii]–v. "Preliminary Note," pp. [1]–6. Text, pp. [7]–80. Ticknor and Fields' "New Books and New Editions" occupy 12 pages at end, dated March, 1856.

POETICAL WORKS, Boston: Ticknor & Fields, 1857.

Two vols.

The second volume opens with "A Fable for Critics." In all previous editions the headline had been, "A Fable for the Critics," but in this one it is made to conform to the title-page. In the first and subsequent editions the date had been "October the 21st day," but in this one it is changed for the first time to "October the 31st day," which has been since retained.

A Fable for Critics, by James Russell Lowell. With vignette Portraits of the Authors de quibus fabula narratur. [Riverside Press] vignette. Boston and New York: Houghton, Mifflin and Company, MDCCCXCI. [October, 1890.]
12mo, pp. 101, cloth.

Opposite title-page the rubricated title-page as in second edition. Putnam. '48.

[4] To Charles F. Briggs this volume is affectionately inscribed.

[5] This jeu d'esprit was extemporized, I may fairly say, so rapidly was it written, purely for my own amusement and with no thought of publication. I sent daily instalments of it to a friend in New York, the late Charles F. Briggs. He urged me to let it be printed, and I at last consented to its anonymous publication. The secret was kept till several persons had laid claim to its authorship.

POEMS, 1849

POEMS. By James Russell Lowell. In two Volumes. Vol. I. Boston: Ticknor, Reed and Fields, MDCCCXLIX.

16mo, vol. i, pp. xii, 251; vol. ii, pp. vii, 254, boards.

[viii] This edition is a revised one, but as the volumes which form the substance of it had been stereotyped, it was found easier to cancel than to correct. Accordingly several poems and parts of poems have been left out of the first volume, and their places supplied in most instances by selections from an earlier volume, published in 1841. These intercalated pieces will be found sufficiently designated by the dates appended to each.

The second volume has been made correspondent in size with its fellows, by the addition of some poems more lately written.

FIRESIDE TRAVELS

FIRESIDE TRAVELS. By James Russell Lowell.

"Travelling makes a man sit still in his old age with satisfaction, and travel over the world again in his chair and bed by discourse and thoughts."

The Voyage of Italy, by RICHARD LASSELS, Gent.

[Publishers' monogram.] Boston: Ticknor and Fields, 1864 [August].

16mo, pp. [x], 324, cloth.

[iii] To W. W. S[tory].

Who carves his thoughts in marble will not scorn
These pictured bubbles, if so far they fly;
They will recall days ruddy but with morn,
Not red like those late past or drawing nigh!

[v] The greater part of this volume was printed ten years ago in "Putnam's Monthly" and "Graham's Magazine." The additions (most of them about Italy) have been made up, as the original was, from old letters and journals written on the spot. My wish was to describe not so much what I went to see, as what I saw that was most unlike what one sees at home. If the reader find entertainment, he will find all I hoped to give him.

UNDER THE WILLOWS

Under the Willows and Other Poems. By James Russell Lowell. Boston: Fields, Osgood & Co., successors to Ticknor and Fields, 1869. [November, 1868.]

12mo, pp. [vi], 286, cloth, vignette of willow in gilt on front cover; same as blind stamp on back cover.

"Erratum" slip opposite page 286.

[iii]-v. To Charles Eliot Norton, Agro Dolce.

[vi] [ No collection of the author's poems has been made since 1848, and some of those in this volume date back even farther than that. All but two of the shortest have been printed before, either wholly or in part. As the greater number, however, were published more than fifteen years ago, they will have, perhaps, something of novelty to most readers. A few pieces, more strictly comic, have been omitted, as out of keeping; and "Fitz Adam's Story," which some good friends will miss, is also left to stand over, because it belongs to a connected series, which, it is hoped, may be completed if the days should be propitious.]

[iii] PREFATORY NOTE.

My former volume of Essays has been so kindly received that I am emboldened to make another and more miscellaneous collection. The papers here gathered have been written at intervals during the last fifteen years, and I knew no way so effectual to rid my mind of them and make ready for a new departure, as this of shutting them between two covers where they can haunt me, at least, no more. I should have preferred a simpler title, but publishers nowadays are inexorable on this point, and I was too much occupied for happiness of choice. That which I have desperately snatched is meant to imply both the books within and the world without, and perhaps may pass muster in the case of one who has always found his most fruitful study in the open air.

[iv] To Professor F. J. Child

My dear Child, —

You were good enough to like my Essay on Chaucer (about whom you know so much more than I), and I shall accordingly so far presume upon our long friendship as to inscribe the volume containing it with your name.

Always heartily yours,

J. R. Lowell.

[iii] PREFATORY NOTE

I have been often urged to reprint the articles which form the bulk of this volume, by persons who had found them interesting at the time of their first publication, as well as by others who had read them more recently and thought them of some interest even now. I have steadily refused to do what was asked of me, because the greater part of what is here gathered together seemed to me to have mainly a polemic value contemporaneous with the date at which it was written. I have (I know not how wisely) allowed myself to be persuaded that there was also in these papers a certain historical interest as recalling aspects of our politics which perhaps it may be useful not wholly to forget. In looking at them again, after so long an interval (for the latest of them is more than twenty years old), it gratifies me to find so little to regret in their tone, and that I was able to keep my head fairly clear of passion when my heart was at boiling-point.

LATEST LITERARY ESSAYS AND ADDRESSES

LATEST LITERARY ESSAYS AND ADDRESSES OF JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL. [Riverside Press vignette.] Boston and New York: Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. November, [1891.] 16mo, pp. [vi], 184, cloth, portrait.

[iii] NOTE

The publication in a volume of the following Essays and Addresses is in accordance with the intention of their author. Most of them had been revised by him with this end in view. The only one of them concerning which there is doubt, whether he would have published it in its present form, is the paper on "Richard III." With this he was not satisfied, and he hesitated in regard to printing it. It has seemed to me of interest enough to warrant its publication.

The essay on Gray was in large part written more than ten years before it was printed in the "New Princeton Review," in 1880. The essay on the "Areopagitica" was written at the request of the Grolier Club, of New York, for an introduction to an edition of the work specially printed for the Club. I am indebted to the Club for permission to include it in this volume.[1]

LETTERS OF JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL

LETTERS OF JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL. Edited by Charles Eliot Norton. Volume I. [Publishers' vignette.] New York: Harper & Brother, Publishers, 1894 [1903].

Two volumes, 8vo, pp. viii, 418; 464, cloth, portrait.

[iii]–v EDITORIAL NOTE

In making the following selection from the great mass of Mr. Lowell's letters which was in my hands, my attempt was to secure for it, so far as possible, an autobiographic character. And, in the main, this has not been difficult, for few writers have given in their letters a more faithful representation of themselves, and of few men is the epistolary record more complete from youth to age. . . .

Appeared in Elmwood, Autograph, and Subscription editions, 1904, enlarged from the ed. of 1894.

"A number of letters, which have come to me since the original edition of this selection of Mr. Lowell's Letters was published, are now included in their respective places in these volumes. They add nothing essential to the image of him presented in the former edition, but serve to fill up some minor parts of its outline with details which strengthen the likeness." — Editor's Note in first volume.

On a Bust of General Grant

[iii] This little volume contains those of the poems which Mr. Lowell wrote in his last years which, I believe, he might have wished to preserve. Three of them were published before his death. Of the rest, two appear for the first time.

THE POWER OF SOUND

The Power of Sound: A Rhymed Lecture by James Russell Lowell. Privately printed. New York. MDCCCXCVI.

16mo, pp. x, 35, cloth. The lecture occupies pp. 1–27, notes, 31–35. Reverse of p. 35, stamp of Gillis Press. Number of copy in ink, with initials of E. H. Holden, by whom the publication was made. "Of this Edition of The Power of Sound only seventy-five copies have been printed, of which twenty-five are on Japanese paper and fifty on hand-made."

The editor, Professor Charles Eliot Norton, says in his introductory note: "Mr. Lowell did not esteem this rhymed lecture of sufficient worth to include it in his Published Poems. It is too hasty an improvisation to deserve the Imprimatur; but though his judgment of it as a whole would be accepted as correct, it yet contains passages of such excellence, alike of humor and sentiment, and it affords such illustration of his convictions in regard to public affairs just before our Civil War, that, I believe, there can be no question as to the propriety of preserving it in print, and I have therefore acceded with pleasure to Mr. Holden's proposal to print an edition of it for private circulation. I have been unable to ascertain the precise date either of the writing or the delivery of the lecture; nor do I know how often, or, except in a single instance [Newburyport, Mass.], where it was read in public. An approximate date for its original composition, however, and for additions subsequently made to it, may be fixed by internal evidence. There are several references in it to incidents which occurred during the summer of 1857, from which it may be concluded that it was written in the autumn or early winter of that year; while other references in the additions show that the latest of them belong to the spring of 1862. The only existing copy of the poem is in print on galley slips, cut up so as to make twenty-three pages. The margins of many of these pages are full of corrections and additions written in ink or pencil. It was put into type and cut up into its present form for convenience of reading in public."

Vol. I. LITERARY ESSAYS, I

PREFATORY NOTE TO THE ESSAYS

[v] The greater part of the literary and critical essays here collected was originally written as lectures for an audience consisting not only of my own classes but also of such other members of the university as might choose to attend them. This will account for, if it do not excuse, a more rhetorical tone in them here and there than I should have allowed myself had I been writing for the eye and not the ear. They were meant to be suggestive of certain broader principles of criticism based on the comparative study of literature in its large meaning, rather than methodically pedagogic, to stimulate rather than to supply the place of individual study. . . .

[vi] Let me add that in preparing these papers for the press I omitted much illustrative and subsidiary matter, and this I regret when it is too late. Five or six lectures, for instance, were condensed into the essay on Rousseau. The dates attached were those of publication, but the bulk of the material was written many years earlier, some of it so long ago as 1854. . . .

[iii] Prefatory Note to the Poems

There are a great many pieces in these volumes, especially in the first of them, which I would gladly suppress or put into the Coventry of smaller print in an appendix. But "ilka mon maun dree his weird," and the avenging litera scripta manet is that of an overhasty author. Owing to the unjust distinction made by the law between literary and other property, most of what I published prematurely has lost the protection of copyright, and is reprinted by others against my will. I cannot shake off the burden of my early indiscretions if I would. The best way, perhaps, is to accept with silent contrition the consequences of one's own mistakes, and I have, after much hesitation, consented to the reprinting of the old editions without excision.

I must confess, however, that I have attained this pitch of self-sacrifice only by compulsion, and should have greatly preferred to increase the value of this collection by lessening its bulk. The judicious reader will, I fear, distinguish only too easily what I should wish, in parliamentary phrase, "to be taken as read." . . .

POEMS. JOHN DONNE. From the Text of the Edition of 1633, revised by James Russell Lowell. With the various readings of the other editions of the Seventeenth Century, and with a preface, an introduction, and notes by Charles Eliot Norton. New York: The Grolier Club, 1895.

In two volumes.

"After the publication of the Boston edition [1855], Mr. Lowell scored the margins of the volume with emendations, mainly of the punctuation, amounting to many hundreds in number. It seemed a pity that this work should be lost, and the Grolier Club undertook the present edition for the sake of preserving it. In order to give this issue still further value, a comparison has been made of the texts of all of the editions of the seventeenth century, from the first in 1633 to the last in 1669, and the various readings noted. This was done by Mrs. Burnett, the daughter of Mr. Lowell, and by myself, with the result which is shown in the footnotes."

MANUSCRIPTS

A large quantity of Lowell's notebooks, manuscripts of lectures, newspaper clippings of lectures, letters, and other materials, have been given by Professor Charles Eliot Norton to the library of Harvard University. This collection is especially rich in letters from Lowell's numerous friends and correspondents. In his letter of presentation Professor Norton describes these letters:

"There are thirteen (13) portfolios containing letters addressed to him by American correspondents for the most part previously to his being sent to Spain as our minister. The letters in these portfolios are arranged in alphabetical order, and many of them are of value as autographs, and of interest as illustrating the conditions of American literature from about the middle of the last century onward. Many of them contain interesting matter concerning the literary projects of a time that was full of them, both in New York and in Boston. The little group of authors who tried to make New York a literary centre, from 1840 to 1850, and whose names even now are almost forgotten, are well represented in the letters of Duyckinck, Cornelius Matthews, James, and others. There are a number of letters relating to the early years of the Atlantic Monthly; and you will see that there is a very considerable parcel of letters of Dr. Holmes, and what is perhaps of still more interest, a yet larger parcel of letters of John Holmes. There is also a number of Whittier's letters and poems.

"But, beside the literary interests which are represented in these letters, the anti-slavery interests are also largely illustrated by a very considerable number of letters of Edmund Quincy, of Wendell Phillips, and of others, — the leaders in that cause.

"Both these groups of letters are imperfect, because of many having been returned to their writers, or to the representatives of their writers. Perhaps the most important letters of early years which are missing here are those of Charles F. Briggs, who at the time of Mr. Lowell's beginnings in literature was his closest friend and most frequent correspondent. His letters have gone back to his family, who desired them. In the case of some other writers, themselves dead, but who have living representatives, I have obtained permission to retain their letters, and to give them to the college. The most important case of this kind is that of Mr. Richard Grant White, whose numerous letters are of more than usual interest.

"In addition to these portfolios are two containing the letters of numerous English correspondents, of which perhaps the most interesting are the numerous letters of Judge Thomas Hughes; but there are many others of literary or other interest. These also are arranged in alphabetical order, but there are two portfolios in which the letters are not arranged alphabetically, but chronologically. They are of late years, — 1885 to 1890, — and the letters are for the most part mere notes, of more interest for their writer's sake than for their contents."
